Welcome to Psychiatric Nursing. This course will cover the essential components required for being a safe practitioner in the area of behavioral health. Multiple teaching modalities will be utilized.

Course Description

Videbeck's Psychiatric Mental Health Nursing utilizes the nursing process framework. The text emphasizes assessment, therapeutic communication, neurobiologic theory and pharmacology throughout its chapters. Interventions focus on aspects of care, which includes clients care, communication, client and family teaching, and community resources, as well as practical application in various clinical settings. Students will be presented with current knowledge related to care of the mentally ill, including elderly considerations. Key points, critical thinking questions, drug alerts, cultural considerations, application of the nursing process, and clinical vignettes will allow facilitation of the nursing student's learning.

Course Objectives

- Describe basic concepts of mental health nursing including delivery of client care, critical thinking, health education/promotion, nursing process and current issues in psychiatric nursing
- Discuss the neurobiologic and psychosocial theories related to mental illness, psychopharmacology, and various treatment settings in which mentally ill patients received care
- Understand the concepts of therapeutic relationship and therapeutic communication
- Describe the client's response to illness and correlating assessment strategies
- Discuss legal and ethical issues, and emotional concerns related to the mentally ill population
- Describe the major categories of the DSM-IV-TR
- Describe the role of the mental health nurse in various practice settings
- Incorporate the nursing process in caring for mentally ill client, with implementation of safe and effective care
